The exhibition shows, once again, the latest technologies of the market in terms of food processing. The companies of the sector will be present and tell us how they are getting ready for the greatest event of the sector in our country.

On September 18-21, a new edition of Tecno Fidta in Costa Salguero Center will bring the latest news in products and services related to food processing. More than 160 firms will receive 10,000 professionals of the industry, generating new links, contacts and business.

Some of them tell us their plans for these four days of intense activity and the proposals that will surprise visitors.

From Ecopreneur, for example, it is announced that they are developing environmental solutions that allow generating renewable energy. They are "Biomass Anaerobic Digesters in Wet Phase", through which several types of substrates such as agricultural waste, animal dung, fats, sludge and its combinations can be processed. "The generated biogas, prior purification, will turn into biomethane that will be able to supply a co-generator to produce electric and thermal power. It can be used in their own effluent plant. The excess of energy that will not be used, can be injected in the electric network", explains Eduardo Porto, General Manager of the firm.

Alfa Argentina, on its part, highlights the importance of participating in Tecno Fidta to be near its customers and the market. "In each edition, we offer a work space to share advances and news that are the result of a hard work", states its Commercial Manager, Nicolás Morero. The company will present several pieces of equipment, such as AMTEK machinery, BACKSAVER, ILPRA, Packaging Atlantis-Pak and ADM Functional Proteins. "In spite of the internal market situation, we are constantly investing in growth. In 2017, we opened the new plant in San Francisco, Córdoba. In 2018, the investment involves the incorporation of new machinery, technology and the most important: professionals", highlights Morero. The company certified its new plant under HACCP standard and it is within Global Markets Programme of GFSI, in order to strengthen its commitment with safety.

In particular, they will promote their pneumatic transportation systems and its latest advances regarding material packing and palletizing.
